

Aidan Curivan submission of 26 September
2022

PE1911/P – Review of Human Tissue (Scotland)
Act 2006 as it relates to post-mortems

I am trying to change the Law/Policies & Procedures in Scotland. I was horrified to learn today via social media that post mortems involve the removal of brain, throat, and tongue, with tissues not being returned that are sent for investigation. After this investigation, there seems to be a sneakiness in Scotland that involves not returning them to families. This makes life more difficult for grieving families, and is beyond everything, wrong.

We are given the choice to vote, freedom of speech - but have no say over our deceased loved ones' bodies. Where are our human rights here?