Interparliamentary Finance Committee Forum Meeting: Portcullis House, 21 March 2024

Dear Laura,

We are writing to you as the lead for Treasury interest in devolution to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland on behalf of the Interparliamentary Finance Committee Forum (the IFCF).

The IFCF was established in June 2022 by the Finance and Public Administration Committee of the Scottish Parliament and Finance Committee of the Welsh Parliament to provide a collective voice for the devolved legislatures in raising issues of common concern with devolved administrations and the UK Government. The IFCF provides opportunities for information-sharing, to hear from relevant Ministers, and to consider common challenges.

Northern Ireland Assembly officials currently attend IFCF meetings in an observer capacity, and it is hoped that its Finance Committee will also be able to join the IFCF in the coming weeks.

Our third meeting took place at Portcullis House in the House of Commons on Thursday 21 March 2024, where we met with Members of relevant Commons Committees, a former HM

Interparliamentary Finance Committee Forum

Treasury Minister, the Institute for Government, and Office for National Statistics. As part of our discussions about financial scrutiny, we also discussed how HM Treasury interacts with the devolved governments in developing the UK Budget and related timetables. The aim was to foster greater understanding around the challenges faced in scrutinising devolved budgets, and to share respective approaches to parliamentary scrutiny of budgets and associated forecasts. The IFCF found these meetings incredibly useful and is grateful to all those who participated.

We were very disappointed that HM Treasury Ministers and officials declined to meet with the IFCF while we were in London. This is a missed opportunity to develop relationships and greater understanding around our respective roles, including how HM Treasury approaches budgetary decisions and their impact on the devolved administrations.

HM Treasury's approach reflects the recent experience of both Committees in being unable to secure oral evidence sessions with the Chancellor and/or other Treasury Ministers, despite repeated invitations. It also represents a departure from your predecessors' approach in previous parliamentary sessions. It is deeply disappointing and inhibits effective scrutiny of the overall funding position in the devolved nations. As you know, effective budgeting is essential in the context of the shared fiscal pressures faced by the UK Government and the devolved administrations. Further devolution and the sharing of powers in recent years has also led to budgetary decisions in the UK and the devolved nations becoming more closely linked. Discussion of these matters with HM Treasury would therefore be most helpful and we therefore urge you and/or the Chancellor to give evidence to our respective Committees when asked.

An issue of particular concern is the increasingly variable timing of the Autumn Statement which, over the past two years at least, has resulted in additional pressure on the time available to the Senedd and Scottish Parliament to conduct its subsequent scrutiny of the devolved governments' budget proposals. In addition to giving greater consideration to this matter, we would also welcome your efforts to provide greater certainty to the devolved governments regarding multi-year spending plans and the earlier sharing of information, particularly in relation to final supplementary estimates which can substantially impact on in-year budget plans.

The IFCF is keen to reopen dialogue with HM Treasury on these and related matters and remains ready to welcome Ministers to the Senedd and Scottish Parliament to support our respective scrutiny of budgetary issues. We therefore invite you to update us on how you would wish to engage with the devolved Parliaments.

We are due to meet next as a IFCF later this year. We therefore look forward to receiving a response to this letter by the end of June 2024.

Yours sincerely
