

Social Security Administration and Tribunal Membership (Scotland) Bill

[As Amended at Stage 2]

Revised Delegated Powers Memorandum

Introduction

1. This memorandum has been prepared by the Scottish Government in accordance with Rule 9.4A of the Parliament’s Standing Orders, in relation to the Social Security Administration and Tribunal Membership (Scotland) Bill. It describes the purpose of each of the subordinate legislation provisions in the Bill and outlines the reasons for seeking the proposed powers. This memorandum should be read in conjunction with the Explanatory Notes and Policy Memorandum for the Bill.

2. Text has been added or amended as necessary to reflect the amendments made to the Bill at Stage 2 and these changes are indicated by sidelining in the margin.

Interpretation

3. In this memorandum:
- “the Social Security Act” means the Social Security (Scotland) Act 2018
  - “the Tribunals Act” means the Tribunals (Scotland) Act 2014.

Outline of Bill Provisions

4. The following provisions of the Bill confer, or modify, powers to make subordinate legislation:

- Section 1B(4) inserts section 85B(5) into the Social Security Act to require the Scottish Ministers to define in regulations who is an “appropriate person” for the purpose of giving the certification required by new section 85B(4)(b).
- Section 1B(5) inserts section 85C into the Social Security Act, to require the Scottish Ministers to prepare and publish guidelines governing their decisions in connection with appointments under sections 85A and 85B of the Act.

- Section 1B(7) inserts new section 85E into the Social Security Act, to give the Scottish Ministers a power to issue and publish guidance for persons appointed under sections 85A and 85B of the Act, about the way in which the role of appointee should be carried out.
- Section 3 extends the regulation-making power under section 79 of the Social Security Act so that it may be exercised to create criminal offences.
- Section 5 broadens the regulation-making power under section 75 of the Social Security Act so that it can be exercised to make provision about the investigation of offences created by regulations under section 79, as well as the offences in Chapter 6 of Part 2 of the Act.
- Section 7 modifies schedule 5 of the Social Security Act to allow the Scottish Ministers to specify in regulations which healthcare professionals can diagnose a person as having a terminal illness in order for the person to then be entitled to disability assistance on that basis. It allows Ministers to specify in regulations that they must accept a diagnosis of terminal illness from a healthcare professional that was formed, in respect of an individual who is resident outside the UK, without regard to the statutory guidance, but only if it would not be reasonable to insist on a diagnosis that was formed with regard to the guidance.
- Section 7A modifies section 51 of the Social Security (Scotland) Act 2018. It inserts a new schedule 11 of the Act, to introduce powers for the Scottish Ministers to make provision in regulations about circumstances in which an individual who has an entitlement to assistance is not to become entitled to be given some or all of the assistance that they would otherwise be given at the time that they would otherwise be given it, and in that event about how and when an individual is to become entitled to be given assistance again.
- Section 7B modifies the schedules making further provision about the regulation-making powers exercisable under sections 28, 31, 33 and 35 of the 2018 Act, to introduce powers for the Scottish Ministers to prescribe circumstances in which an individual who is entitled to assistance may be paid a nil amount.

- Section 7C inserts section 87A into the Social Security Act, to give the Scottish Ministers power to make provision in regulations to transfer some or all of the competence and jurisdiction in relation to recovery of money owed under section 63 of that Act, or under regulations made under Part 3 of that Act, from the Sheriff courts to the First-tier Tribunal for Scotland. Section 9(4) extends the regulation-making power in section 38 of the Tribunals Act so that the power can be exercised to make provision about the role that may be played in the decision-making process of the First-tier Tribunal for Scotland by an extra judge who has been temporarily authorised to assist in the disposal of the Tribunal's business by the new subsection (1)(b) of section 18 of the Tribunals Act (which is inserted by section 8 of the Bill).
- Section 10 confers a power on the Scottish Ministers to make ancillary provision by regulations.
- Section 11 confers a power on the Scottish Ministers to bring those provisions of the Bill that are not to come into force automatically following Royal Assent into force on a day specified by the Ministers in regulations.

Rationale for Subordinate Legislation

5. In deciding whether a matter should be left to subordinate legislation, the Government has carefully considered the need to:

- strike the appropriate balance between the importance of the issue and providing sufficient flexibility to respond to changing and unforeseen circumstances,
- make proper use of valuable parliamentary time,
- take account of the likely frequency of amendment, and
- anticipate the unexpected, which might otherwise frustrate the purpose of the provision approved by the Parliament.

Delegated Powers – New

Section 1b(4) – Appointees

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers

Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made By Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Negative

Provision

6. Section 1B(4) inserts 85B(5) into the Social Security Act, to create a new power for Ministers to make provision in regulations to define who is an “appropriate person” for the purposes of section 85B(4)(b), also inserted by section 1B(4).

7. This provision relates to Ministers’ power to appoint a person to act on behalf of an individual who is an adult with capacity, which applies only where the individual indicates their agreement to the appointment (by virtue of section 85B(4)(a)), and where an appropriate person certifies that, in their opinion: the individual has capacity, understands the effect of the appointment, has not been subject to any undue influence, and the proposed appointee is a suitable person (by virtue of section 85B(4)(b)).

Reason for Taking Power

8. It is considered appropriate to define who is an “appropriate person” in regulations rather than in primary legislation, as the list of appropriate persons may require to be varied in light of changing circumstances and as new forms of assistance are introduced in due course by regulations under Part 2 of the Social Security Act. For example, the list is likely to include a number of professionals involved in supporting those applying for Disability Assistance, and the flexibility of secondary legislation will be required to update the list to reflect any changes from time to time in the types of professional who carry out this role in practice. It would make for a poor use of parliamentary time if every refinement of the system required primary legislation.

9. Choice of procedure Regulations under section 85B of the Social Security (Scotland) Act 2018 are subject to the negative procedure. This is a matter of administrative nature and will only be used where an individual indicates their agreement to the appointment by virtue of section 85B(4)(a), therefore negative procedure is appropriate.

Section 1b(5) – Guidelines for Decisions About Appointees – New

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Preparation and Publication of Guidance by Scottish Ministers

Provision

10. Section 1B(5) inserts section 85C into the Social Security Act. Section 85C places a requirement upon the Scottish Ministers to prepare and publish guidelines governing their decisions in connection with appointments under sections 85A and 85B of the Act. The Scottish Ministers may revise the guidelines and must make the latest version of the guidelines publicly available by such means as they consider appropriate.

Section 1b(7) – Guidance for Appointees – New

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Preparation and Publication of Guidance by Scottish Ministers

Provision

11. Section 1B(7) inserts new section 85E into the Social Security Act. Section 85E gives the Scottish Ministers a power to issue and publish guidance for persons appointed under sections 85A and 85B of the Act. This guidance should be taken into account by any person appointed under sections 85A and 85B of the Act.

Section 3 – Offences

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

12. Section 79 of the Social Security Act allows the Scottish Ministers to establish schemes through which they can supplement, or top up, so-called reserved benefits (which is to say forms of social security assistance that remain reserved to the UK Parliament). Section 3 of the Bill amends section 79 so that regulations under that section can establish offences in connection with the top-up schemes. Section 3 of the Bill also amends section 80 of the Social Security Act in order to constrain the power to create offences so that regulations cannot assign a more severe maximum penalty for any new offence than applies in relation to the fraud offences set out in Chapter 6 of Part 2 of the Social Security Act, which apply in relation to the devolved forms of assistance given under that Part.

Reason for Taking Power

13. There needs to be a mechanism for effectively dealing with fraud against top-up schemes established by regulations under section 79. Section 3 of the Bill inserts a new section 80A into the Social Security Act which will provide that, as a default position, the fraud offences set out in Chapter 6 of Part 2 of the Social Security Act will apply in relation to any top-up scheme as they apply in relation to devolved forms of assistance given under that Part. However, those fraud offences were designed to operate in the context of the processes for giving assistance under Part 2 of the Social Security Act. The processes surrounding the giving of some forms of top-up assistance, which will be set out in regulations under section 79, may be quite different from the processes set out in Part 2. Therefore, the fraud offences that were designed with the Part 2 processes in mind may not catch all of the fraudulent behaviour that they should in relation to a given top-up scheme. As the processes surrounding each top up scheme will be a matter for regulations, it makes sense for the fine-tuning of the offences that relate to each scheme to also be a matter for regulations in order to ensure a proper fit is achieved.

Choice of Procedure

14. Regulations under section 79 of the Social Security Act are subject to further procedure as set out in section 97 of the Act. This means that in addition to requiring the Parliament to approve any regulations in draft, a draft of any regulations must be sent to the Scottish Commission on Social Security whose expert report will then inform the Parliament's consideration of the draft regulations. The Government does not consider the modification of section 79 to allow it to be used to create offences precipitates any need to revisit this highly robust scrutiny mechanism.

Section 5 – Investigations

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers

Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

15. Section 75 of the Social Security Act allows the Scottish Ministers to make regulations about the investigation of offences under the Act, which means the fraud offences in Chapter 6 of Part 2. As discussed above, section 3 of the Bill expands the power under section 79 of the Social Security Act so that regulations under that section can provide for fraud offences in relation to top-up schemes. Section 5 of the Bill modifies section 75 of the Social Security Act in consequence of section 3 of the Bill, so that regulations under section 75 (or in its new guise section 84A) can also make provision about the investigation of offences created by section 79 regulations.

16. As alluded to in the preceding paragraph, section 5 of the Bill renumbers section 75 of the Social Security Act as section 84A, having moved it from Part 2 to Part 4 of the Act. This is a cosmetic adjustment to ensure that the structure of the Act continues to make sense in light of the former section 75 ceasing to be a provision that is relevant only in relation to assistance given under Part 2 of the Act and becoming a provision relevant to the giving of assistance under Parts 2 and 3 (Part 3 being the Part which provides for top-up schemes).

Reason for Taking Power

17. It follows that if the Scottish Ministers are to be able to create fraud offences in relation to top-up schemes by regulations that they should also be able to make provision by regulations about the investigation of those offences. The Scottish Ministers already have the power to make regulations about the investigation of the offences set out in Chapter 6 of Part 2 of the Social Security Act and their having the power to make provision by regulations about offences in respect of top-up schemes too will allow a consistent regulatory framework for the investigation of social security offences to be produced.

Choice of Procedure

18. Regulations under section 75 of the Social Security Act are presently subject to the affirmative procedure. Enabling regulations under that section to make provision about the investigation of offences created by regulations under section 79, as well as the offences provided for in Chapter 6 of Part 2, does not materially change the nature of the power. The Government therefore sees no reason to disturb the judgement that the Parliament made when it passed the Bill for the Social Security Act that the affirmative procedure is appropriate for regulations under section 75.

Section 7 – Persons Who Can Give Diagnosis

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers

Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

19. Section 31 of the Social Security Act empowers the Scottish Ministers to make regulations setting out the eligibility criteria for disability assistance. Schedule 5 makes provision about the exercise of the power conferred by section 31. Paragraph 1 of schedule 5 requires the Scottish Ministers to provide in the regulations that anyone with a terminal illness is eligible for disability assistance and that the Scottish Ministers must accept a diagnosis of terminal illness from a registered medical practitioner as sufficient evidence that a person has a terminal illness. Registered medical practitioners are required to have regard to statutory guidance before making this diagnosis. The guidance is to be prepared by the Chief Medical Officer.

20. Section 7 of the Bill amends paragraph 1(2) of schedule 5 of the Social Security Act so that regulations under section 31 must require the Scottish Ministers to accept a diagnosis of terminal illness not just from a registered medical practitioner but from anyone who falls within the definition of “appropriate healthcare professional” instead.

21. Section 7 goes on to insert a number of new sub-paragraphs into paragraph 1 of that schedule, making further provision about the content of regulations made under section 31. In particular to provide that regulations under section 31:

- may provide that an individual who is not resident in the United Kingdom is to be regarded as having a terminal illness despite the appropriate health professional having formed their clinical judgement without having had regard to the Chief Medical Officer's guidance, where it would not be reasonable in the circumstances to require regard to be had to that guidance (sub-paragraphs (2ZA) and (2ZB)),
- must define what is meant by "appropriate healthcare professional" for the purpose of determining entitlement to disability assistance (sub-paragraph (2A)) and must, as a minimum, define it so as to cover registered medical practitioners and registered nurses, but may also include registered members of other healthcare professions e.g. members of allied health professions (sub-paragraph (2B)(a) and (b)),
- may stipulate other conditions that must be fulfilled for someone to be regarded as an appropriate healthcare professional within the definition (sub-paragraph (2B)(c)), and
- may make different provision about the requirements for being an appropriate healthcare professional for the purposes of determining entitlement to disability assistance for individuals who are resident in the United Kingdom and those who are not (sub-paragraph (2B)(d)).

Reason for Modifying Power

22. In the course of consulting on the Chief Medical Officer's guidance referred to in sub-paragraph (3) of paragraph 1 of schedule 5 of the Social Security Act, it became apparent to the Government that in many cases registered nurses would be well placed to provide diagnoses of terminal illness for the purposes of determining entitlement to disability assistance. The Bill might have amended paragraph 1 of schedule 5 to insert a reference to registered nurse to sit alongside the existing reference to registered medical practitioner. However, this would be inflexible. It may emerge from experience once disability assistance is operating that members of some allied health professions would also be well placed to provide diagnoses of terminal illness.

23. Experience may also highlight a need to require those providing such diagnoses to have undergone specialist training or in some other way be identified as suitable to perform the role. It would make for a poor use of parliamentary time if every refinement of the system required primary legislation. Additionally, the need to establish different provision about the requirements for being an appropriate healthcare professional for the purposes of determining entitlement to disability assistance for individuals who are resident in the United Kingdom and those who are not, is best established in regulations allowing for flexibility should this be needed. For the small number of clients not resident in the UK it was deemed there could be situations where it would not be reasonable in the circumstances to require the appropriate healthcare professional to have formed their clinical judgement having had regard to the Chief Medical Officer's guidance. Moreover, as is being vividly demonstrated at the time of writing, events can arise that require a more rapid reallocation of resources within the health service than would be possible if a Bill were required to adjust who can provide a terminal illness diagnosis for social security purposes.

Choice of Procedure

24. Regulations under section 31 of the Social Security Act are subject to further procedure as set out in section 97. The Government considers it appropriate that regulations dealing with who can diagnose a terminal illness for the purpose of establishing someone's eligibility for disability assistance should be subject to that same highly robust form of scrutiny as applies to regulations under section 31 making any other sort of provision about eligibility for disability assistance.

Section 7a – Suspension of Assistance – New Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

25. Section 51(1)(a) of the 2018 Act allows provision to be made in regulations for entitlement to specified types of assistance to be determined on an ongoing basis and such regulations are to prescribe the time, or times, at which an individual is to become entitled to be given that assistance under a determination of ongoing entitlement. By virtue of section 51(1)(b), such regulations can also provide for exceptions to any provision made by virtue of section 51(1)(a).

26. Section 7A amends section 51 to insert new subsection (1)(aa), which allows Ministers to also be able to prescribe circumstances in which an individual who has an entitlement to assistance is not to become entitled to be given some or all of the assistance at the time at which that assistance otherwise should be given, and to make provision about how and when the individual is to become entitled to be given that assistance again. In effect, the regulations will prescribe circumstances in which payments of assistance may be suspended.

27. Section 7A introduces new schedule 11 which makes provision about the exercise of this new regulation-making power. In accordance with paragraph 5 of schedule 11, regulations must provide that when a suspension ends the individual is entitled to be given all the assistance that, under the latest determination of entitlement, the individual would have been entitled to receive but for the effect of the suspension.

28. Schedule 11 contains safeguards which are intended to limit when the power to suspend assistance in accordance with regulations is available as well as providing individuals whose assistance has been suspended with the right to require that the Scottish Ministers review their decision.

Reason for Taking Power

29. The development of detailed provisions prescribing the circumstances in which an individual is not to be entitled to be paid assistance at the time when they otherwise would have been entitled to receive a payment on an ongoing basis, is likely to require a novel approach for each form of assistance. Different considerations may apply to disability assistance than to housing assistance, for example, and a complex statutory framework is more suited to secondary legislation.

Choice of Procedure

30. Regulations under sections 28, 31, 33 and 35 are subject to further procedure as set out in section 97 of the 2018 Act. The Government considers it appropriate that regulations dealing with how much assistance an eligible individual is entitled to be given should be sent to the Scottish Commission on Social Security whose expert report will then inform the Parliament's consideration of the draft regulations.

Section 7b – Non-Payability Of Assistance – New Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

31. Chapter 2 of Part 2 of the 2018 Act contains 9 sections each with a regulation making power to prescribe eligibility rules to a particular type of assistance, and to prescribe how much assistance a person who is eligible is entitled to be given. Each section has its own schedule which makes provision about the exercise of the regulation making power.

32. Section 7B modifies the schedules which relate to the regulation-making powers under sections 28, 31, 33 and 35 in Chapter 2 of Part 2 in substantially the same way, and which respectively relate to carer's assistance, disability assistance, employment-injury assistance and housing assistance.

33. Section 7B inserts new provision into schedules 2, 5, 7 and 9 to allow regulations to provide that in certain circumstances the value of assistance to be given may be set at £0. Such provision must be framed so as to apply at least by reference to one of the following matters:

- the individual being resident and present in a particular place during a period, or
- the individual being in receipt of another type of assistance (under the 2018 Act or any other enactment) in respect of the period.

34. The regulations may also include provision by reference to further matters in addition to those listed.

35. Such provisions may only be made by Scottish Ministers where they consider it would be in the interests of individuals to whom the provision applies to be entitled to assistance with a value of £0 in respect of the period rather than not being entitled at all.

Reason for Taking Power

36. The development of detailed provisions prescribing the circumstances in which an individual may be paid £0 in respect of assistance given under the Act is likely to require a novel approach for each form of assistance. Different considerations may apply to disability assistance than to housing assistance, for example, and a complex statutory framework is more suited to secondary legislation.

Choice of Procedure

37. Regulations under sections 28, 31, 33 and 35 are subject to further procedure as set out in section 97 of the 2018 Act. The Government considers it appropriate that regulations must be sent to the Scottish Commission on Social Security whose expert report will then inform the Parliament's consideration of the draft regulations.

Section 7c– Assistance Given in Error: First-Tier Tribunal's Jurisdiction - New

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

38. Section 79 of the Social Security Act allows the Scottish Ministers to establish top-up schemes by regulations. Amongst other things, regulations under section 79 can make provision about what happens in the event that someone receives an overpayment of financial assistance through a top-up scheme. One possibility is that a legal process will follow through which the Scottish Ministers will seek to recover the overpayment. Ordinarily, such an action would be raised in the sheriff court.

39. Section 68 of the Social Security Act allows the Scottish Ministers to make regulations transferring the competence and jurisdiction that a sheriff would have, in relation to the recovery of money owed under section 63 of the Act, to the First-tier Tribunal for Scotland so that proceedings could be taken in that forum instead of the sheriff courts. However, section 68 only applies in relation to overpayments of assistance under Part 2 of the Social Security Act, not under top-up schemes.

40. Section 7C of the Bill repeals section 68 of the 2018 Act and replaces it with section 87A to make clear that, amongst the things regulations under that section may do in relation to overpayments under top-up schemes, is transfer some or all of the competence and jurisdiction to the First-tier Tribunal, just as can be done in relation to Part 2 overpayments by regulations under section 87A.

41. Section 87A also now places a duty on Scottish Ministers to transfer some or all of the jurisdiction as described above at least once, where previously under section 68 use of the power to make regulations to do this was at Ministers' discretion.

Reason for Taking Power

42. Section 79 of the Social Security Act already confers a broadly expressed power on the Scottish Ministers to make provision about assistance given in error through top-up schemes. The details of top-up schemes will vary from case to case and so it is sensible to have the power to make bespoke provision in regulations. For some schemes, it may make sense to have the First-tier Tribunal rather than sheriff courts involved in actions to recover overpayments, particularly if that produces parity with the position in relation to overpayments of assistance under Part 2 of the Social Security Act. For other schemes, which are less akin to the system of Part 2, a different approach to dealing with overpayments may be more appropriate.

Choice of Procedure

43. Regulations under section 87 of the Social Security (Scotland) Act 2018 will be subject to affirmative procedure. The effect of section 87A of the Bill is to elaborate on the already broad power that section 79 confers to make provision about assistance given in error through top-up schemes. The Government does not consider the addition of that elaboration to warrant revisiting the highly robust scrutiny mechanism that already applies to section 79 regulations.

Section 9 – Consequential Modifications in Relation To Tribunal Membership - Revised

Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument

Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative

Provision

44. Through regulations under section 38(1) of the Tribunals Act, the Scottish Ministers can make provision about the composition of the First tier Tribunal for Scotland when convened to make a decision in a case. Section 8 of the Bill amends section 18 of the Tribunals Act to allow certain people to be authorised to sit temporarily as judicial members of the First tier Tribunal. Section 9(4) of the Bill extends the power under section 38(1) of the Tribunals Act to make provision about the composition of the First tier Tribunal in deciding a case so that regulations under that section can include provision about the role that can be played in making decisions by any extra judge who is sitting by virtue of the amendments made by section 8 of the Bill.

Reason for Taking Power

45. The First-tier Tribunal is divided thematically into chambers. The role of ordinary, legal and judicial members in decision making differs between the chambers. There is therefore a need to have the flexibility of subordinate legislation to describe the role in decision making that is to be played by the extra judges allowed for by section 8 of the Bill.

Choice of Procedure

46. Regulations under section 38(1) of the Tribunals Act are subject to the affirmative procedure. The adjustment of that power by section 9 of the Bill, in consequence of the changes made by section 8, does not materially alter the nature of the enabling power. The Government therefore considers it appropriate to leave the scrutiny procedure applicable to those regulations unchanged.

Section 10 – Ancillary Provision
Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power
Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory Instrument
Parliamentary Procedure: Affirmative If Modifying Primary Legislation, Otherwise Negative

Provision

47. Section 10 provides that the Scottish Ministers may by regulations make supplementary, incidental, consequential, transitional, transitory or saving provision in connection with the Bill's provisions.

Reason for Taking Power

48. Section 10 follows the now standard model for the power to make ancillary provision. Any new law may give rise to the need for a range of ancillary provisions. Without the power to make that provision by regulations it would be necessary to return to the Parliament with another Bill to deal with minor matters to properly give effect to a Bill that Parliament has already passed. That would not be an effective use of either the Parliament's or the Government's resources. The power is restricted in that it can only be used to make provision ancillary to the Bill's provisions.

Choice of Procedure

49. Regulations under section 10 will be subject to the affirmative procedure if they add to, replace or omit any part of the text of primary legislation. Otherwise, they will be subject to negative procedure. This is the standard approach in relation to the scrutiny of regulations made under ancillary powers and the Government sees no special reason to depart from it in this case.

Section 11 – Commencement
Power Conferred On: The Scottish Ministers Power
Exercisable By: Regulations Made by Scottish Statutory
Instrument
Parliamentary Procedure: Laid, No Procedure

Provision

50. Section 11 provides for itself, the other provisions normally found at the end of a Bill (i.e. the ancillary provision section and the short title section) and sections 3, 5 and 6, to come into force on the day after Royal Assent. It then confers a power for the Scottish Ministers to bring the other sections of the Bill into force on a date they appoint by regulations.

Reason for Taking Power

51. It is typical for the coming into force date of a Bill's substantive provisions to be appointed by regulations. This Bill follows that standard model, save in relation to sections 1A, 3, 5, 6, 7C, 10 and 12, which are substantive provisions that policy considerations require be brought into force earlier than would otherwise be the case. For the rest, having them come into force on a date appointed by regulations means that the Government can appoint a date having ensured that everyone who needs to prepare for the law changing has made the necessary preparations.

Choice of Procedure

52. As is now usual for commencement regulations, the default laying requirement will apply, as provided for by section 30 of the Interpretation and Legislative Reform (Scotland) Act 2010. The Government considers this appropriate because the policy behind the provisions will already have been considered by the Parliament during the passage of the Bill.
